

GOVERNMENT DEGREE COLLEGE, RAVULAPALEM

THE DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH

Best Practices of the Department

- Adapting student-centered teaching strategies for languages

The Department has been in a position to inspire the students in the Department to achieve the highest levels of excellence in learning and understand learning as a lifelong process by using student-centered methods of teaching with special emphasis on the four language skills, listening, reading, speaking, and writing.

- Activity-based and experiential learning through the Literary Association

The Department organises various literary events, poetry recitation programmes, interactive sessions, and lectures under the auspices of the Literary Association of the Department in an effort to engage the students with an understanding of art, life, and the various literary genres. While planning numerous events on a monthly basis, students serving as leaders in the Association gain a variety of managerial and life skills in addition to a thorough comprehension of literature.

- News Reading regularly in the Public Addressing System during lunch break- which promotes spoken/pronunciation skills and provides a great sense of educational value. It carries a lot of information about the happenings in the world.

- Promoting Peer to Peer Learning
Benefits

- Students see each other's perspectives to help them progress their knowledge.
- Teaching others helps us to learn a topic in even more depth.
- Social interaction may help motivate students to learn.
- Studying together can become 'fun', which in turn may encourage students to continue to focus on the topic for longer.

PEER TO PEER LEARNING

DEFINITION

Peer-to-peer learning occurs when students engage in collaborative learning. Students learn from one another, not the teacher.

Peers can:

- Learn with each other.
- Learn from each other.
- One learn from the other.

BENEFITS

- Students see each other's perspectives to help them progress.
- Teaching others helps us to learn a topic in even more depth.
- Social interaction may help motivate students to learn.
- Studying together can become 'fun', which in turn may motivate students.