About the Seminar:

“THE TRANSFORMING SCENARIO OF INDIAN BANKING IN RETROSPECT AND PROSPECT”

Background including details of past events organized on the proposed topic:

The basic principles of economics in any country is demand and supply. One side there is consumption that is called demand and another side there is a producer who supplies the goods and services. If we have to measure the growth momentum in an economy that is just by the level of consumption because consumption drives the growth.

As we all know our economy is facing many problems, the government is doing tremendous efforts to make our economy healthier, many steps have been taken by the government like the government has reduced corporate tax cut by 30% to 22% to attract multinational company to invest in our country as companies have to pay less tax then a company's profit will be high and that money company can use for the expanding of their firms and if many companies invest in India then jobs will be created so we can say this corporate tax will definitely help our country to grow.

Although the government has taken many steps but there are many areas where the government has to also focus as our economy is divided into three sectors primary sector, secondary sector and tertiary sector. The primary sector includes agriculture, secondary sector include industries and tertiary sector include services.

Role of banking in economic developments as mentioned above demand is directly linked with supply, the demand is a direct relationship with purchasing power of citizen of any nation and this purchasing power can be abroad also because it can boost our exports if we focus the purchasing power within the country this purchasing power comes in the hand of people by various means. One means in employment if people are employed the get salary and these people buy goods as employment condition is not very good in our country.

The Banking industry and financial institutions are vital sectors of any economy. It is a proven fact that the development of banking industry has a great impact on the growth of the country. In the era of “Digital India”, the banking industry has undergone a revolutionary change in our country.

Today, we have a well-developed banking system with different classes of banks working in consonance with the regulations of the RBI. The banks have shed their traditional functions and they have been innovating, improving and coming out with new types of services to cater to the emerging needs of their customers. The advent of technology and electronic banking facility made things which appeared to be impossible a few years ago became possible now. In addition to this, the amalgamation of 10 public sector banks into four big banks is expected to give a big boost to the economy. Further, reforms like inviting private investments in Indian Banking and Disinvestment of LIC are also in pipe line.

C. Aims/ Objectives :

The main objective of the seminar is to provide a platform for academicians, policy makers, researchers and students to discuss the trends and challenges that recently emerged in the banking sector with special emphasis on digitization for a better conclusion based on the different articles submitted by the participants in the seminar.

D. Target audience/ participants with expected number:

We plan to invite renowned scholars from Central Universities, State Universities, IIT's, NIT's, Research Institutions, NGOs, Industrialists. The academicians and students from all over India can participate in the programme. The seminar is useful for scholars, rural industrialists, rural people and farmers. We expect 200 participants from all over India.

E. Details of Sessions:

The seminar will be conducted through four technical sessions. Scientific papers are presented during these plenary sessions and mainly focusing on effectiveness, conclusiveness and practicality on Recent Trends in Banking, Transforming Scenario of Banking in India. The details of sessions are

09.30 A.M	To	10.00 AM	:	Registration
